CFHS Annual Networking Conference

The annual CFHS conference is an opportunity for groups to come together and share learning, practice and skills. This event also brings together others tackling food and health inequalities within wider health improvement activities across Scotland.

Would you like to share your work and achievements at this year's conference?

Presenting a workshop involves the delivery of a short presentation about your work, what you do and an interactive session with participants around your workshop theme (no Powerpoint presentations). This year we are particularly keen to prioritise community-based and community-led activities that address the topic of food and health activity within wider health improvement and health inequality agendas. The interactive workshop sessions are informal to encourage and enable full contribution from a wide range of participants. We are eager to make it as easy as possible for the community and voluntary sector to participate in delivering workshops..

Here are some ideas about workshop themes:

People and activities

Minority ethnic communities/intergenerational work/peer education/maternal and infant nutrition/early years/young people/adults/older people/communities/volunteering/social enterprises/growing projects/ community gardens/mental health/disabled people/independent living skills/people who have a sensory impairment

Developing skills

Cooking skills/growing skills/networking/monitoring and evaluation/funding/lobbying/recruiting and managing volunteers/promoting your activities/engaging with communities/procurement and tendering/capacity building/engaging with policymakers

Policy and impact

Local, regional and national strategies and action plans – how are you involved?
Evaluation – are you having an impact? How do you know?
Engaging with community planning – how are you doing it?
Developing links to local strategies, policies and structures? i.e. Single Outcome Agreements
HEAT targets.
